Forest's motorized trails ready for riding

RHINELANDER, Wis. (June 8, 2011) -- The Chequamegon-Nicolet National Forest's motorized trails are ready for riding thanks to the trail riders' patience.

"Our motorized trails are mostly dry and in good condition at this time," said Catherine Pinegar, Forest Recreation Planner. "They are open for people to enjoy!"

All-terrain vehicle riders did their part to help protect everyone's recreation opportunities by honoring this spring's trail closure and its voluntary extension, she said.

Late spring weather conditions and additional rain made the trails prone to erosion and other damage. With dryer weather, the trails are ready for use.

"We really appreciate the public's patience and willingness to refrain from riding on the trails when they were wet due to our late spring conditions," Pinegar said.
